AN ERUPTION MAGNIFICENT

Volcano House tonight. I have just returned from it with a party of friends tonight. It is a grand sight—something no one can appreciate until he sees it for himself.

"We visited the volcano on our arrival here, and we thought we were well paid for our trip. We found everything as it was represented to us. But now we feel more than paid, and consider ourselves fortunate in having the pleasure of being here at this particular time. The indications are that it will probably be active for some time. We shall visit it again in the morning.

"We have been here a week, and shall remain ten days longer. The manager of the hotel, Mr. Demosthenes Lycurgus, has made it more than pleasant for us. The hotel is all that anyone can expect, as the table is supplied with the best the market can afford, and with vegetables from their own gardens. They also have natural sulphur baths connected with the hotel.

"I can't see how any one can come to Honolulu and not to the volcano, as it is the attraction of the islands. I am,

"Yours truly,

"C. S. SCOTT."

MR. SCOTT TARRIES.

Mr. Scott asks Trent & Co. to arrange a trip for himself and party to Japan and China on the return of the Mongolia, thus indicating that his stay in the islands will be extended yet another month.

SPECIAL VOLCANO EXCURSION.

Wilder's steamer Kinau will depart on a special excursion to the volcano this afternoon, the hour depending on the time of the P. M. S. S. Mongolia from the Orient. Trent & Co. are booking passengers at $40 for the round trip, everything included, to return next Saturday.

FIRST MAN TO WITNESS OUTBREAK

The first man, other than a regular volcano guide, to see the commencement of the present eruption in the crater of Halemaumau, Kilauea, on Hawaii, was Mr. A. H. Wilcox, a tourist. Mr. Wilcox is the President of the First National Bank at Frazee, Minnesota. Mrs. Wilcox, his wife, was the next person to see the first spouting columns of fire which denoted the fresh outbreak.

Mr. Wilcox and his wife returned yesterday on the Kinau from Hawaii, and are again registered at the Young Hotel, where they will remain until the departure of the Aorangi for Victoria on March 8.

"I decided to go over to the crater from the Volcano House on Thursday afternoon," said Mr. Wilcox yesterday. "My wife did not wish to go. She was afraid the trip would tire her out, but finally she and I, accompanied by a guide went across the lava. We left the horses at the corral and then went to the rim of the crater. The guide was ahead of me. He called me and said, 'It sounds as if somebody was working down there,' pointing through the smoke to the depths below. I leaned over and just then a column of fire shot up through the smoke. The wind was head against us then and it was difficult to keep our eyes centered on the pit on account of the smoke. But when the second column of fire shot up it seemed to consume the smoke—I can explain it no other way. The smoke left and we could see fairly well into the pit.

"I then called to Mrs. Wilcox and she came and leaned way over. Mrs. Wilcox has more nerve than I for gazing into perilous depths. From where we stood the first column came up from a point far out from the perpendicular of our position and it looked to be twenty to thirty feet in height."

Mrs. Wilcox in describing the outbreak said: "We could hear rumbling and then explosions, and then a fountain of fire would shoot up. I could distinctly hear particles of something falling back on the fountain, and presume they were splashes of lava."

"It was a grand sight and fortune seemed to smile upon us who had come so many thousands of miles just to see that crater. It was certainly a very obliging thing for the volcano to give us a private exhibition.

"It would be a terrible and awe-inspiring thing just to see the crater as it was, but with the fountains of fire added, it became wonderful. I wouldn't have missed the sight for anything."

Mr. Wilcox said he had visited bullfights in Mexico and witnessed many strange sights, but there was nothing to tingle his blood as the sight of a volcano in eruption.

"I consider that Mrs. Wilcox made a pretty good trip, for a woman nearly seventy years of age," said he. "I remember once we climbed up into a lighthouse at St. Augustine, Florida. It had 160 steps, but on reaching the 150th, Mrs. Wilcox decided she would back out and she returned to the ground.

"On Thursday after going down the path a ways toward the crater she backed out and only after long persuasion would she continue. Now she's glad she yielded."

CHARGES PREFERRED AGAINST MAGOON

Sidney M. Ballou yesterday formally brought charges against J. Alfred Magoon in the Supreme Court as follows:

"To the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii:

"I deem it my duty as a member of the bar of this Honorable Court to bring formally to the attention of the Court the acts and conduct of J. Alfred Magoon, an attorney of this court, as shown by the record in the case of L. H. Dee vs. W. H. Smith, lately heard and decided by this court.

"I charge that the uncontradicted evidence in that case shows:

"(1) That J. Alfred Magoon, while acting as attorney for certain judgment creditors, stockholders of the Kamalo Sugar Company, Ltd., accepted a retaining fee from Frank Hustace, one of the joint judgment debtors, in the matter of advising him how to escape from the full liability of the judgment, thereby acting at the same time and in the same matter for two clients, whose interests were diametrically opposed.

"(2) That J. Alfred Magoon advised said Frank Hustace to make a deed of all his property to a third person, the necessary effect of which would be to hinder, delay and defraud his creditors, including the stockholders of Kamalo Sugar Company, Ltd., for whom J. Alfred Magoon was then acting as attorney.

"(3) That said J. Alfred Magoon, after having given the advice aforesaid, and while retaining the retainer paid by Frank Hustace, betrayed Hustace, by not proceeding against the co-defendants of said Hustace as agreed, but on the contrary, causing execution to be levied on certain property conveyed by said Hustace and after sale attack in said conveyances as fraudulent.

"I respect to which I request this Honorable Court to cause such investigation to be made or proceedings to be brought as it may deem proper in the premises.

(Sig.) "SIDNEY M. BALLOU.

"Honolulu, February 25, 1905."

On receiving the foregoing accusatory document, the Supreme Court made an order to the Attorney General to investigate the charges.
